Varieties of Religious Naturalism
Wesley J. Wildman — Boston University — Spring 2010 — STH TT861/TT961

Course Description

The aim of this course is to learn about varieties of religious naturalism and how they have been, and can be, incorporated into philosophical and theological reflection. The seminar will read a variety of works in contemporary religious naturalism, from twentieth-century classics to current contributions, and from theoretical analyses of the meaning of naturalism to surveys attempting to map out the territory of plausible viewpoints. We will also track the close relationship between religious naturalism and both ecologically-rooted forms of spirituality and nature-centered forms of mysticism.

The class is intended for advanced masters students and doctoral candidates interested in contemporary forms of philosophical and theological reflection on nature and God, and in forms of spirituality rooted in the natural world. Students registered at the 900-level have readings and a bibliographic task to complete over and above the obligations of students registered at the 800-level. Classes will meet once a week on Wednesdays from 8:00 to 11:00 in STH 319. Each class will be conducted in the seminar discussion format with lectures given by the instructor as needed or requested. The 800-level version of this course counts (1) as an MTS Core Concentration course for Science and Religion, for Theology, and for Area B; and (2) as an MDiv Theology 3 Core Elective. It may also count (3) as a requirement for a BTI Certificate program in science and religion.

The main product of the course will be a research paper on some aspect of the course material, topic to be approved in advance by the instructor (50%; 3,000 words for 800-level students, 5,000 words for 900-level students). There will also be several 1,500-word reviews of books and articles presented in class, brief reviews of excerpts from Gottlieb (2004) or other sources, short analyses of usages of the terms “naturalism” and “religious naturalism” suitable for web posting, and annotation of links to relevant web sites, all to appear on a public website for the class (30%). The remainder of the grade (20%) will be based on the quality of seminar participation, including attendance, timeliness, and discussion. Incompletes are not allowed—except when they are; paperwork is necessary. Plagiarism is not allowed—ever. Know the rules.

In addition to the public website, the class will have a private website at blackboard.bu.edu. This site will contain announcements, a discussion board, and places to claim assignments to avoid overlap with other students.

Seminar Schedule

Introduction

Jan 13 Naturalism, Religious Naturalism, and Ecological Spirituality

> Required Reading for ALL: Raymo; read it after class if you can’t get to it before class; all other readings in this course should be read prior to class.

> Task for ALL: Read three diverse selections from Gottlieb 2004. Write a two-paragraph review of each selection. The first paragraph should be a summary of the piece. The second should be a personal response. Don’t worry about overlaps with other students; the more the merrier for this exercise. Voice: For each review, the summary should be impartial and brief. The response can be as wild and colorful as you like; nothing conforming to basic rules of public decency is out of bounds. Target the review to curious students like yourself. Be yourself. Writing quality matters. Deadline: via email to the instructor by 11:59pm Friday 1/15.

> Task for ALL: Find one online source about naturalism (not necessarily religious naturalism; that will be for next week). Rate (out of 1, 1.5, 2, 2.5, 3, 3.5, or 4 stars) and write a 100-word review of the site. Confine the scope of your review to the usefulness of the site for understanding religious forms of naturalism. Reserve your review site using the class website’s discussion board designated for that purpose. Voice: Aim the review for web browsers like yourself. The review should be formal, fair, and helpful. Writing quality matters. Deadline: via email to the instructor by 11:59pm Sunday 1/17.

Part 1: Mapping the Territory—Without Mistaking Map for Territory

Jan 20 Map #1

> Required Reading for ALL: Stone.

> Required Reading for TT956 only: Corrington, Introduction and ch 1.

> Task for ALL: Read three more diverse selections from Gottlieb 2004 (that makes 6 so far). Write a two-paragraph review of each selection, as described above. Deadline: via email to the instructor by 11:59pm Tuesday 1/26 (before the next class).

> Task for ALL: Find one online source about about specifically religious naturalism. Rate and review as decribed above. To avoid duplication, reserve your review site using the class website’s discussion board designated for that purpose. Deadline: via email to the instructor by 11:59pm Tuesday 1/26 (before the next class).

Jan 27 Map #2

> Required Reading for ALL: Ritchie.

> Required Reading for TT956 only: Corrington, ch. 2.
